1 General Tournament Rules

Read the general tournament rules of the current event.
All the general rules apply to this tournament.

2 Match format

2.1 Rules

The tournament uses the default competitive rule set (or something very close to it) of Overwatch where the same hero can be picked only once per team and without a role selection limit. Furthermore are all heroes allowed and the players are allowed to switch heroes during the match.

2.2 Structure

The exact tournament structure will be decided at the event but it will most likely be a group phase followed by an elimination bracket. Depending on how much time we have, the elimination bracket will be either single or double elimination.

3 Matches

3.1 Mapveto

For choosing the map, each team will ban one map per turn until only one map is left. That map will then be played. You can try <http://owdraft.com> for doing the mapveto but it does not always seem to be up-to-date with new maps or you can do them face to face or ingame in the chat. At the LAN, we may also provide you additional tools for deciding which map to play. The team which begins with banning should be picked at random.

3.2 Server

The lobbies for the games will be created by one of the teams. We may provide you additional tools to simplify team matching. The exact settings for the lobbies will be provided at the LAN Party but they will be close to the default competitive settings.

3.3 Pause

The player who created the lobby will be able to pause the game. If there are any technical problems, it has to be written in the chat and the player who created the lobby has to pause the game. It is not allowed to pause the game for tactical reasons. In case of controversy, please contact an admin.

4 Map pool

All maps from the following categories are allowed: Assault, Escort, Assault Escort and Control. Arena maps will not be played at this tournament.

5 Other

A full description of how everything works exactly will be provided at the event. You may ask the admin responsible of this tournament before the event if you have any questions.
